

Dr. Bernie Langer is one of 800 physicians who participated in the activities of self-regulation last year.

Bringing their expertise to the table

The Ontario physicians who keep self-regulation healthy

Last year, hundreds of physicians across the province participated in the regulation of the profession of medicine by providing expert opinion, developing policy, acting as investigators or assessing peers.

In these pages, you will see the names of more than 800 physicians who gave of their time – in fact, more than 25,000 hours in 2007 – to ensure that regulation of the profession by the profession continues to be the best model of medical regulation in Ontario.

“I’d like to take this opportunity to thank those physicians who so generously took time away from their busy practices to actively contribute to self-regulation,” said Dr. Rocco Gerace, College Registrar.

“By bringing their clinical expertise and commitment to medical professionalism to the table – their sense of what is practical, reasonable and in the best interests of patients – they are ensuring that regulation of the profession by its own members remains the very best way to ensure that patients in Ontario receive the best possible health care,” he said. ►►

We'd like to thank:

The major misconception about medical regulation is that it is punitive. In the large majority of cases, [assessment] becomes a bilateral educational experience.

HOW CAN YOU PARTICIPATE IN SELF-REGULATION?

- Run for Council
- Vote in Council elections
- Take an interest in who you elect for Council
- Participate on College committees
- Perform case reviews, assessments
- Become a Peer Assessor
- Provide input into policies

Our primary mandate is to protect the public, but many times that means advising or warning the physician about areas needing improvement rather than removing the physician from practice (which I think is what we all fear when we receive a complaint). Even in the case of serious clinical concerns, every effort is made to remediate the physician, providing the public is protected during the process.

Dr. Carol Leet, Pediatrics Complaints Committee Co-chair

“The main misconception about medical regulation is that it is a membership of out-of-touch individuals making decisions for the greater profession. In fact, that is not the case. The CPSO is made up of front-line physicians who face the same challenges all physicians do in their practice.

Dr. Patrick Safieh, Family Medicine,
Quality Assurance Committee Member

“I think that most physicians are happy not to be regulated either directly by government or by health insurance companies. I also believe that most recognize that the public – through government – requires regulation and that self-regulation of the profession by physicians themselves is the best way to go as long as we can show that we are doing it well and acting in the public interest.
